

Editor/Writer for a policing think tank!

At the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) we're not just a think tank – we're catalysts for progress. Our work on critical issues in policing drives decision-making at all levels of government. We're looking for an experienced editor/writer who has knowledge of the field of policing, criminal justice, or public safety and can synthesize concepts, meeting notes, and research into clear, concise reports.

Join a dynamic team united by a common goal: making a tangible difference in public safety by helping us produce finely crafted publications. A list of our work can be found here:

Key Requirements

- ✓ Experience writing and editing reports on policing or criminal justice issues.
- ✓ Ability to articulate complex concepts and think strategically to distill key messages and insights from data and research.

Our Team and Compensation:

We offer a competitive salary starting at $150,000, accompanied by a comprehensive benefits package. The benefits include a generous retirement plan, medical, dental, and vision insurance, flexible spending account, and life insurance. We also provide access to meaningful professional development opportunities.

Our office is located in Washington, D.C., however, this position offers the option of a flexible/remote work arrangement.

All Applicants Welcome:

Diversity is a core value and we welcome applicants of all backgrounds. We encourage applications from all genders, races, ethnicities, and ages, as well as veterans and people with disabilities.

To Apply:

Interested candidates should submit a cover letter, resume, and writing sample of at least 500 words to perfapplications@policeforum.org.
